Outskirts Press, United States, 2009. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 226 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .A new collection of poetry-honest, insightful, and rich with beauty-from American poet and teacher Robert Garson From Crossing the Narrows come a poet s observations in three acts. It is a book filled with fleeting moments of passion and awkwardness, of love lost and found, and quiet self-realization. Though we see the world through his eyes, Garson s words reveal our own deeply human frailties. He is the wandering observer, where even in the midst of hours spent in the classroom, the poet s heart speaks: The Teacher Pauses in September Early, early, an hour before the first bell, I should be grading student papers, essays that tell me of their lives. My life has become a bold red pen, it seems, the ink like no blood that could run through veins. And even as I sit at this worn desk, the leaves are changing, crisp and gold and magnificent as they die in air I cannot feel. You ve used your commas wrong, I write. Subject, verb do not agree. Organize! Organize! And there, outside, beyond: that furious blue sky.
