Excerpt: .the tenant is entitled to a certain quantity of wood, which is called house-bote or fire-bote. for the plaintiff, in cross-examining a witness, that you went on the land for the express purpose of cutting wood? Yes, your worship. And what was the size of the wood? Small twigs and switches, your honour. What--twigs and switches--and pray, sir, what right had you to cut these small twigs and switches? Oh, sir, I cut them for botes. Boats, indeed, why they could hardly have been big enough for walking switches. Some of our ablest lawyers have made sad Failures, when, in addressing a jury they have attempted to interest the feelings, or to appeal to the sympathies. Those who, in the process of acquiring profound knowledge, have sequestered themselves from the world, and to whom its ways and opinions have become less familiar than the...
